CASE, Inc. along with Summer Neilson Moshy, Ph.D. (Theatre), is offering a new drama program for children and teens with ASD. This particular 2-week long camp will focus on traditional theatre/acting/movement technique, voice & body awareness, teamwork, storytelling, lots of theatre games, as well as "mapping out the stage." After working with children who have ASD, Dr. Moshy has found that expanding the idea of "mapping out the stage" (beyond identifying the physical elements of the stage/scene: props, sets, parts of the stage, stage directions, etc.), to include literally marking out a physical path on the stage, has been very useful in assisting actors with ASD to more effectively navigate the stage. For actors with ASD, this technique identifies something concrete in an otherwise imaginary space. Please join us at this wonderful camp for children and teens with ASD.
